

Do I Really Need A College Interview?

Not all schools require interviews. However, even if the particular school you've applied to doesn't require an interview, there is nothing wrong with contacting the admissions office to request one. If you're good at interviews, this will help you stand out from the pack, and may make the difference between being waitlisted and being accepted to a school. That said, if you don't think an interview is your strongest suit and they don't ask for one, don't request one. Let your strong grades, test scores and application speak for you.
